PHYTOLOGIA MEMOIRS are published by Harold N. Moldenke and Alma L. Moldenke, 303 Parkside Road, Plainfield, N. J. 07060, USA., as an international scientific series to facilitate the publication of larger botanical and phyto-ecological papers.

Mexico has held, for several centuries, a fascination for countless plant-oriented individuals. Regretably, not all of this fascination has been beneficial to the country due to unsupervised, large-scale collecting in the past. Stricter laws, now in effect will, hopefully, insure the survival of many endangered species there. However, with the increased pressure now being exerted, especially upon tropical taxa, it seems necessary for botanists to quickly ascertain the status of threatened species and, with government cooperation, conserve large samples of them. Seed banks and vegetative propagation should also be on the agenda. Aside from the purely aesthetic value of plants, there exists, in Mexico, a vast pool of potentially valuable genes which must not be allowed to perish. Time is of the essence. Space permits us only to mention the beneficial results from the work on Dioscorea.

The history of plant exploration is also outside the scope of this work but reference is made here to the fine studies of Dr. I. Langman (1964), Dr. J. Rzedowski (1978), Dr. H.W. Rickett (1947), Dr. McVaugh (1972), Dr. Leon (1895), and C.E. Chardon (1949).

Many of the cited references in the present work, especially to those who are deceased, contain information on itineraries, accomplishments, and other valuable data. Frequently we are alerted to the dangers and tragedies of botanical collecting. For example, Denis Cowper died of a heart attack while collecting cacti in Mexico; Josiah Gregg succumbed to starvation on the trail in western United States; Berlandier drowned along the Mexican-United States boundary; W.A. Kellerman died of malaria in Guatemala and Gustav Wallis died of fever in Ecuador. We salute these and other martyrs to our science.

The purpose of the present work is to document the extent of collecting activity that has progressed in Mexico. No book of this nature can ever be considered complete if for no other reason than that new people continuously filter into the field. Aside from this consideration, a complete (?) list could only be compiled by a careful scrutiny of every herbarium in the world that holds Mexican material. Obviously, such a project would be beyond the lifetime capabilities of any one individual. The present list, aside from its fraternizing aspect, might induce plant historians to write more biographies as has been done for E. Palmer and C.G. Pringle.

To gather our information, we have consulted books and articles on collectors, read many research articles and looked at many exsiccatae. In addition, many hundreds of letters have been written for the purpose of clarifying certain details. We used extensively Dr. Langman's 1964 book. Those authors mentioned in her book who definitely collected, we have placed in the main body of this work. Others, about whom we were not sure, are listed in a separate section. Many authors in her book, are not included here at all. No doubt there will be, when judgement is the only guide, errors of both omission and commission.

Many research articles were read on a systematic basis. For example, all available volumes, usually starting with the first one, of the following serials were examined: Madroño, Annals Missouri Botanical Garden, Smithsonian Contributions to Botany, Rhodora, Phytologia, Brittonia, Flora Neotropica, Flora Veracruz, Memoirs New York Botanical Garden, Boletín Societe Botánica Mexicana, University of California Publications in Botany, Biotropica, Systematic Botany, Journal Cactus and Succulent Society of America, Sida and the Southwestern Naturalist. It became apparent that if all articles in which the collector's name were cited, the reference section would be book-sized. Accordingly, only some representative titles are given. In some cases, verification is given only by citing the specimen and the herbarium. In a few cases, only the herbarium is given as supplied from a list of collectors sent to me by herbaria curators. Standard herbaria acronyms are used throughout while a few herbaria have no assigned initials. Our major effort has been directed toward the collectors of phanerogam. We have however, added the names of cryptogam collectors when brought to our attention.

As one might suppose, there were some problems which arose in the preparation of our list of collectors. Sometimes monographers misspell the collectors name or they omit the initials. This becomes serious in the latter case, when we encounter about 15 "Smiths", 22 "Garcias", 14 "Johnsons", and so forth. I urge authors to include the initials either in the text or in a list of exsiccatae at the end of the article. Some Latin American collectors do not use their mother's name and thus we may very well have some duplications. We have added as many birth and death dates as we could find but, in some cases, there are differences of opinion from authority to authority.

Finally, I wish to thank the hundreds of individuals who have helped in one way or another, especially the curators and their faithful assistants.

Supplementary List

We believe that we have included in the above list, all of the main collectors and many of the casual ones. Others, in Langman's book, seem to have done some collecting judging by the titles of their papers but I have not seen other verification. I believe I will get less criticism if I include them here than had I omitted them - my apologies, however, for omissions. Dr. Guzman and others have also suggested some names - and also included are some that were omitted from the main list, and some from Vegter's (1983) list.

OTHER POSSIBLE COLLECTORS - In the directory of members of the Botanical Society of Mexico (see Sosa 1981), there are listed ca. 819 members. Some of these are in the lists above. One could assume that some of those omitted have done some collecting but this has not as yet come to our attention. Also, at least one more issue of the "Collectors" series of the Index Herbariorum will be forthcoming. This should be consulted as it appears in print.
